He keeps yelling that I am being “mean” and “rude” and “immature” he lectured me about “age” when he himself cannot act like a man and stop pressuring me.

Creating room to know each other beyond that context, taking an interest in them outside of the immediate to do list and generally having a few more glasses of wine than the busyness of diaries would suggest is advisable are all must-dos if we’re going to get back to being trusted advisers rather than asset suppliers.
