   Informal investors - usually family members or 'angel' investors - are also likely to have invested smaller sums, which explains why only one in 10,000 start-ups have VC funding, explained Prof Wong. Singapore, he noted, is promoting the VC industry such as through its $1 billion Technopreneur Investment Fund which co-invests with VCs. But it could also consider tax incentives for angel investors, like those in the UK which allow them to offset losses in one investment against profits in another investment when filing their taxes, he said.
